Opposition to Security Pact

Lord Beaverbrook's Newspaper Declares War on Franco-British Accord—Italian Press Says Italy Should Not Join.

(By Davis M. Church, International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, June 10.—Active opposition developed in England today to the Franco-British accord as announced at Geneva and which would insure France's western borders by force of British arms.

Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper, the Daily Express, declared war upon the security pact.

Under the heading, "no to the pact," the Daily Express announced it will campaign vigorously "against this diversion of traditional British policy."

Lord Beaverbrook's opposition to the security pact is likely, in the opinion of political observers, to arouse considerable of a following. The opposition might possibly develop int on political battle such as marked the league of nations fight in the United States senate.

There are large number of isolationists in England, and, if Lord Beaverbrook can rally them to his banner, he can make the fight interesting. It has been whispered in parliamentary circles that Lord Beaverbrook is anxious to launch a new political party.

While the Morning Post and other government influenced newspapers strongly support the security pact, there was a disposition on the part of the liberal independent papers to be more critical.

Representatives of the dominions were diffident toward the pact. Apparently they were fearful lest it mean Great Britain would be so tied up in securing the defense of Europe that it could not give the dominions full protection.

The British dominions will not be consulted in regard to the security pact until the pact is ready for signature, the foreign office stated today. When the document is ready, the dominions will be asked to approve.

Rome, June 10.—Italy should not join Great Britain in the security pact to protect France's borders because the Alpine border is excluded from the pact, the newspaper Messagero said today.

Italy is making direct overtures to Germany, Messagero declared, for a security agreement covering the Alpian border.

ANTI-KLANSMEN AND KLAN STAGE MELEE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Clinton, Mass., June 10.—Thirty-six men were brought into district court today following the worst riot of a series in Worcester county between members of the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klansmen.

Many on both sides were injured but as they were taken to their homes the number is not known.

Klansmen in 300 automobiles clashed with anti-Klansmen afoot. Automobiles were stoned and personal clashes between the two forces were frequent.

State troopers finally broke up the melee and made the arrests, a majority of those taken into custody being Klansmen and their sympathizers.

After the riot, the streets for blocks were covered with stones, brickbats and clubs used by the rioters.

There was a report that Governor Fuller and Superintendent of State Police Foote were urged by selectmen to visit Clinton and view the damage but the report could not be verified.

CAILLAUX ASSURES SENATE MORGAN LOAN IS UNUSED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, June 10.—It was learned today that Finance Minister Caillaux assured the senate finance commission at a secret session that the $100,000,000 Morgan loan is still unused.

The recent rise in the franc, Caillaux said, was entirely without governmental intervention, except for the moral value of the threat to use the Morgan loan.

Sentences in County Court

Bradford Has License Revoked and Fined $300—Lennon Sentenced to Dannemora—Sentence Finehout Monday.

After a brief session of county court Tuesday afternoon at which time District Attorney Traver's criminal calendar was further reduced by pleas of guilty, Judge Fowler decided to discharge the jurors in attendance at the term. A calendar had been prepared for the afternoon session and two cases were ready for trial. At the morning session Edward Finehout's attorney announced that at 2 o'clock he would be ready to take a jury and try the case. When 2 o'clock came he entered a plea of guilty. Brevier Lennon and Hurl G. Bradford likewise entered pleas of guilty and the court was without a case to try. In view of the fact that there was no further case which needed immediate attention and it was difficult to hold jurors at this time without having actual trials both Judge Fowler and District Attorney Traver agreed that the jurors should be released so that they might return to their work. Court went into recess until Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock without a jury.

Samuel Brocht, indicted for abduction, alleged to have been committed in the town of Wawarsing on May 2, 1925, was arraigned in court and entered a plea of not guilty. LeRoy Lounsberry appeared for him and requested 20 days to make further motions.

To a second indictment charging him with operating a motor vehicle on May 1, 1925, in the town of Wawarsing while in an intoxicated condition, Brocht entered a plea of not guilty.

Hurl G. Bradford, charged by the grand jury with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, in the town of Rochester on April 11, entered a plea of guilty when he was arraigned. Bradford was sentenced to pay the state of New York $200 and sent to jail for three months, the jail portion of the sentence being suspended on condition that he behave himself and pay to the county of Ulster $100. He paid. His license was also revoked.

Bevier Lennon changed his former plea of not guilty to that of guilty, to burglary, third degree. Lennon has been in jail for about six months. It is alleged that he entered a place at Kyserike and took a quantity of goods in company with others. Lennon has been convicted of grand larceny before as well as having been in other trouble. His attorney, John B. Sterley, asked the court to be as lenient as possible under the circumstances. The court sentenced Lennon to an indeterminate term in the Clinton State Prison at Dannemora, the minimum of which shall be one year nine months and the maximum two years and six months.

Edward Finehout, after a long consultation with his attorney, Thomas F. Coughlin, decided to enter a plea of guilty to the crime of incest. Finehout also has a past record with the courts and pending investigation Judge Fowler postponed the imposing of sentence until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Court then went into recess until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock without a jury.

ATTEMPT TO FIRE TWIN MOUNTAIN HOUSE

Fred Enders, a local character of Tannersville, a mental defective, who works at odd jobs and roams about the section, is being held pending an investigation as to an attempt made supposedly by him to set the Twin Mountain House on fire a few days ago. The mountain house is on the Platte Clove road three or four miles from Tannersville. The fire was discovered in a closet under a stairway among some papers. As the closet door was closed, the fire had only smouldered. Enders had confessed setting mountain fires and this led to the suspicion that he had attempted to burn down the Twin Mountain House. He is being held in the Greene county jail at Catskill for a hearing today.

Governor Calls Special Session For June 22

To Pass a New State Park Appropriation Bill—Will Tell About the Controversy Over Station WGY Thursday Night at 10 o'Clock.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., June 10.—Governor Smith today called the state legislature into extraordinary session for Monday night, June 22, to pass a new state park appropriation bill.

The governor announced he would "tell the people of the state about the park controversy" over the radio tomorrow night at ten o'clock. His speech will be broadcast through station WGY of Schenectady.

The governor said he was confident the legislature would pass the park bill which he will recommend in a special message.

"Nothing but parks will be before the special session because that is all I will recommend in my message," the governor said.

Under the law no subjects except those recommended by the governor can be discussed at an extraordinary session of the legislature.

"I will be on the air for half an hour tomorrow night and I intend to tell the people of this state all about the state park controversy," the governor said. "A number of misleading statements have been issued by the Republicans and I want to straighten things out."

The last legislature passed a bill appropriating $6,000,000 of the $15,000,000 state park bond issue but the governor vetoed the measure after charging that the Republicans were attempting to inject politics into the parks.

The bond issue was approved by the voters at the election last fall by over a million majority but not one cent of the money can be spent this summer unless a bill acceptable to the governor is passed at the special session.

While the governor feels certain that enough public sentiment will be brought to bear on the Republican law makers in the next week to compel the passage of his bill, the Republican leaders do not view the situation in the same light.

Speaker McGinnies, Republican leader of the Assembly while here recently declared he was certain that the Republican majority of the lower house would refuse to support the governor's proposal at a special session.

Two weeks ago the Republican and Democratic leaders of the legislature and representatives of the state park councils conferred with the governor on the park controversy. At the conclusion of the conference the Republicans issued a statement saying they could not take the responsibility of agreeing to pass the bill recommended by the governor.

The state land board is the stumbling block in the fight between the governor and the Republicans. The Republicans insist that the land board approve the appropriation of all land before it is taken over by the state council of parks. The governor contends that such procedure is unnecessary and that the land board will pass out of existence this fall if the amendment to reorganize the state government is adopted.

There was much speculation at the capitol as to how long the special session might last. Some predicted it would not last more than two days, while others thought it might drag along for a week or more.

It was pointed out that the Republicans, who control both houses, could re-pass the bill of last winter and then adjourn without giving any consideration to the bill which the governor will recommend.

An extra session will cost the state upwards of $10,000 a day, it was said.

Crush Rum Trust Before Winter

Is Only Hope of Government as Heavier Coast Guard Craft Must be Withdrawn for Campaign of Navigation Patrol.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 10.—The government hopes to crush the rum trust's sea and land organizations before winter, it was learned at the treasury today.

Officials declared that the heavier coast guard craft must be withdrawn from law enforcement activities late in October for the winter's campaign of navigation patrol both on the Atlantic and Pacific.

Virtually all the cutters now on the rum patrol will be transferred to life and property saving work on the steamer lines.

Insistent demand has been made on congressional representatives from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Hawaii and coastwise cities from New York to Maine that the coast guard be given facilities for more adequate protection of the steamer lanes during the coming winter.

It was charged that in the intensive war against rum, with detailing most of the coast guard equipment to this phase of law enforcement, the normal navigation service has been neglected.

Congressional leaders, who believe that six cutters must be added to coast guard facilities, declared that some cutters engaged in this service are not seaworthy. They pointed out that lives of the crew are endangered and that the cutters are unsafe for operation in heavy gales.

No demand for increase in the law enforcement fleet is anticipated during the budget hearings which start early in the fall, but it was expected that the treasury would recommend the building of several new cutters to take the place of those submarines built during the war, or scrapped since.

The estimate for the coast guard in 1926 is $20,000,000 compared to $28,000,000 for 1925. The appropriation does not contemplate building of new cutters, which cost from $70,000 to $1,000,000 each.

City Used Daily 6,500,000 Gallons

Superintendent Harrison of Water Department Said That During Hot Weather City Used More Water Than Usual—Plenty of Water on Hand.

During the recent heat wave Kingston water consumers used between 6,250,000 to 6,500,000 gallons of water daily in an effort to cool off. The ordinary daily consumption of water in the city is from 4,250,000 to 4,500,000 gallons.

While there is plenty of water on hand in the city's reservoirs the water department is anxious that those who have sprinkling permits sprinkle only in the hours designated. The hours are from 6 to 8 o'clock in the morning and from 6 to 8 o'clock in the evening. Those who use water for sprinkling purposes aside from those hours are depriving those who reside on the high points of the city of water as it reduces the pressure to such an extent that at time they are unable to draw water from the faucets.

Today the board of water commissioners made the annual inspection of the Kingston water shed, making the trip by automobile.

MRS. SCHOELLKOPF ON EUROPE BOUND LINER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—Among passengers on the Europe bound liner Aquitania today was Mrs. C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, wife of the Buffalo millionaire and victim of a sensational $285,000 jewelry robbery on New Year's Eve, 1922. Also aboard was Frank Carmen in whose apartment Mrs. Schoellkopf was robbed of her costly jewels.

Not aboard the vessel but reported to be at his home in Buffalo was Schoellkopf who recently filed suit against Fort Appraiser F. J. H. Krackle for the recovery of $25,000 Schoellkopf alleges he paid to hush revelations damaging to his wife's character during the investigation which led to the recovery of most of the jewels.

Before the liner sailed Mrs. Schoellkopf denied that she was going to Paris to sue for a divorce. She expressed herself as "sick of law suits and publicity." It was to avoid publicity she said, that Carmen's name was kept off the passenger list.

Evolution Trial A Great Benefit

To Country Asserts Dr. Pierce, Who States Bryan Misrepresented the Attitude of Religious Thinkers—Scientific and Religious Truths Consistent He States.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Los Angeles, Calif., June 10.—When John Thomas Scopes, young Tennessee college professor, goes to trial on charges of teaching the theory of elevution, the country "will be done great good" Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Washington, D. C., and spiritual adviser of President Coolidge told International News Service today.

Dr. Pierce who came to Los Angeles to dedicate a church, declared that William Jennings Bryan had "utterly misrepresented" the attitude of many religious thinkers and that Scopes's trial would be welcomed by many members of the clergy as a means of wiping out misrepresentations made by Bryan and others.

Asserting that he believed the theory of evolution as the "best hypothesis of how God works" Dr. Pierce said the scientific truths and religious truth were consistent with each other and "never incompatible' and centering of national interest in Scopes trial is certain, he said, to reveal much that will result in benefit to the entire country.

Dr. Pierce is the guest here of Dr. Frank Dyer, in whose congregational church here there is a "scroll of honor" carrying the names of Darwin with Shakespeare, Mary the Mother of Jesus, Pasteur, Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson and Bradford and Brewster, the Pilgrims.

"The Tennessee evolution trial may work a hardship locally and to those immediately involved in court procedure, but it will result in great good nationally. It will focus attention on the fact that all truth is one, that scientific truth and religious truth are always consistent with each other and are never incompatible and that we make progress in the entire field of knowledge which knows no essential distinction between secular and sacred.

"Ignorance of facts, coupled with misstatements about evolutionists will tend to confuse some people, so good a man as Mr. Bryan in his sweeping generalizations, utterly misrepresents the attitude of most religious thinkers who believe in evolution and who also believe in the Bible as inspired revelations who believe in Christ as God's son, in miracles as manifestations of God's consistent laws and in the prevailing power of prayer.

"Because I believe God's ways of working are unceasing and eternal, because I believe that all law is natural expression of God's life, I believe in the theory of evolution as the best hypothesis of how God works.

"To the best of my knowledge all of the leaders in every church I have served, including my present charge at first congregational church in Washington believe in the evolutionary theory."

CANADA'S NATIONAL DEBT OVER THREE BILLION

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Montreal, Que., June 10.—Canada's national debt has grown to $2,419,000,000 and her railway obligations to $915,000,000 making a total national liability of $3,333,000,000 according to figures given by Senator McMeans Winnipeg in the Dominion senate.

Senator McMeans inquired if the government proposed to make any changes in its final policy this season.

Senator Dandurand, replying for the government, said the government inherited a heavy burden from the war but in four years had reduced the national expenditure from $454,000,000 to $350,000,000 also changing the national Railway deficit from $32,000,000 to $17,000,000. The government's fiscal policy will not be changed, declared the senator.

C. of C. Drive, Nearing End, Is a Success

An air of optimism pervaded the Chamber of Commerce yesterday and today induced by the satisfactory reports of the teams working in the forward Expansion Campaign last week, and the earnestness with which they are striving to make tomorrow's total, when the final reports are in, a substantial one.

With the present membership enrollment larger than it has ever been in the history of Kingston the directors of the Chamber feel that the organization is not in better shape to bespeak community expression on matters pertaining to the welfare of the city as a whole. They feel that the citizens have demonstrated their faith in this city by their gratifying response to invitations to take membership in the Chamber and tomorrow's "clean up" is being made for the double purpose of securing the maximum of man power in membership and that no one shall have the slightest occasion for an excuse that he did not have an opportunity to join during the intensive campaign.

Several of the committeemen came to the Chamber's headquarters this week in quest of more calls showing their eagerness to swell their reports, and it is believed most of them have one or more applications "up their sleeves." It was learned yesterday that directly after Friday's luncheon Max Reben and Lou Coe drove to Newburgh to keep an appointment with the Central Hudson Steamboat Company which corporation previously held two memberships in the Chamber and after the conference they increased this membership to ten. This will go to the credit of committee No. 1 when reporting tomorrow.

Notices, including lists of members, new applications received and prospects not yet signed up have been sent to all workers. The committees are all expected to assemble Thursday morning at 9:30 at the Chamber of Commerce and after making their final dash for two and one half hours they will assemble for the final reports at the Y. M. C. A. where luncheon will be served at noon.

At least two visitors from neighboring cities are expected to be present at the luncheon. Surprise was expressed yesterday as to the interest with which other cities in the Hudson Valley are showing in Kingston's present forward movement.

Arthur Burns, who is a director of the Hudson Valley Federated Chamber of Commerce, went to Albany yesterday to attend a director's meeting of that body and brought back felicitations and best wishes from the Albany Chamber to the Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

Elsewhere in this issue of The Freeman appears a full page announcement of the memberships enrolled in the Kingston Chamber. It was explained that this list of men and firms represent approximately 500 memberships as many of them have subscribed for several memberships to be represented by various individuals within their respective organizations.

GIRL RESCUED WHILE DRIVING OWN DEATH CAR

Heroic Officer Killed While Answering Woman's Call for Help.

Memphis, Tenn.—Forced to take the wheel and drive her own death car, the automobile in which her divorced husband was taking her to a woods where he intended to kill her and himself, Miss Dorothy Reese, twenty-one, was rescued by a policeman whose heroism cost him his life. The tragedy occurred on one of the main streets of the city during a quiet afternoon.

Miss Reese, given the right to assume her maiden name by the court after she divorced her husband, Carl Rogers, was riding in an automobile with her sweetheart, Enoch Gregg.

Opened Fire.

Suddenly Rogers leaped into the machine, thrust a pistol into Miss Reese's back, and ordered her to drive to a woods, where he would kill her and commit suicide, the girl later told police.

Miss Reese drove on until she saw Policeman T. B. Knox and then she screamed for help. Knox leaped from his motorcycle and ran to the car. Rogers opened fire, and the policeman, mortally wounded, pumped two bullets into the body of his slayer and then died.

Tried to Kill Self.

Rogers tried to kill himself, but two other officers arrested him and took him to a hospital. Miss Reese, who also was wounded, was taken to another institution. Rogers will live and will have a speedy trial for murder. Miss Reese, wounded in the knee, will recover but probably will be crippled for life.

"I was paralyzed with fear," Miss Reese told police, in describing her ride to death. "My tongue was dead. There were hundreds of people all around and I knew my former husband intended to kill me—but I could not call for help until I saw the policeman. Then I saw flames in front of me and men shooting pistols. I don't remember any more. I was in the hospital when my senses returned."

Pike's Peak Or—

The late Antonio de Novellis, the veteran musical director, who superintended the original American production of the "Mikado," has a very low opinion of jazz.

"The men who declare that jazz is a sign of progress in American music," Mr. De Novellis said one day in Flushing, "are as ignorant of music as the farmer was ignorant of photography.

"A farmer took his bride to a photographer's and said:

"'We want the wife's picture took.'

"'Full length or bust?' the photographer asked.

"The farmer gave a hearty laugh and slapped the photographer on the back.

"'All right; make it full length, young feller,' he said, 'and if she busts I'll pay for the machine.'"

Mundane Fire No Treat to Miss Spore's Spirits

New York.—The familiars of Madian Spore, psychic painter, failed to apprise her that rubbish had begun to smolder in the ground floor hall of the former Delmonico's at Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, on the second floor of which Miss Spore has her exhibition.

The apparition that suddenly materialized at the doorway of the studio yelling, "Fire, beat it!" was plain flesh and blood. And it wore spats.

About thirty persons who were watching Miss Spore's methods of painting or staring at her plump and colorful canvases, obeyed the warning promptly, joining the rush on the stairs from a golf school on the third floor, which met at the street level the exodus from a real estate office.

Miss Spore, however, who depends entirely on spiritual guidance, knew better than to flee. She began swathing her paintings in canvas to protect them from smoke, which already was drifting into her studio in ever-thickening waves.

All the time the smoke rolled blacker and denser up the stairs and into Miss Spore's studio. All the time Miss Spore, with never a glance out of window or into the hallway, coolly wrapped up her pictures in canvas. There were 175 of them, and by the time she finished the job the last firemen were picking up their hose. Miss Spore missed the fire completely.

His Teeth in His Lungs Send Man to Hospitals

New York.—Attacked by a violent spell of coughing, Conrad Wimier, 187 Thirty-second street, Brooklyn, swallowed his upper teeth. His wife took him to Norwegian hospital, but physicians there were unable to locate the plate and suggested that Wimier return home until later, when an X-ray could be taken and the teeth removed.

He returned home, but the pain became so intense that his wife took him to the Brooklyn Eye and Ear hospital. Physicians there said the work would require specialists and advised him to go home and wait until 9 o'clock. Wimier did.

At 9 o'clock he again appeared, so weak that he was put to bed while the pulmonary region was X-rayed. Late that night the plate with a full set of teeth was removed by Dr John Auwerda, fourteen hours after Wimier had swallowed them. Neither the plate nor Wimier's throat were injured.

Repeating Slander as Bad as Starting It

Atlanta, Ga.—"Tale bearers are as bad as tale makers," thinks the Georgia Court of Appeals. This statement was made in a decision upholding a judgment in the Stephens Superior court, in which $2,000 was awarded in a suit alleging repetition of slanderous remarks.

The court held that even though the original slander started with a third party and the repeater had accepted the statement in good faith, every repetition was a willful slander.

WOMAN DIP TELLS OF HER THRILLS

Fascinated by Excitement of Going Into Pockets.

New York.—Mrs. Tillie Dorf, Brooklyn, who declares she became a pickpocket when eight years old, will ask clemency when she goes before Kings County Judge McLaughlin for sentence. She is in the Raymond street jail, having pleaded guilty of picking the pocket of a woman in a Brooklyn department store. She took $10.30 and was caught by a store detective.

At the jail Mrs. Dorf gave an exhibition of her skill by extracting a vanity case from the pocket of a woman reporter.

"I have done that since I was eight years old," Mrs. Dorf said. "I began with relatives, and I have kept it up ever since. It gives me a thrill I can't get in any other way, but thrills don't count in the end. Sometimes I go straight for months. Then my fingers begin to tingle—I want to see if they can do again what they have so often done.

"As I grew older I began to think how many pocketbooks there were in the world, and how easy it would be to open them. I began to operate in cheap stores and on the sidewalks. After my marriage I promised to reform, but I was unable to break myself of my habit. I have no excuse to offer—I just can't help it."

Gloves, Hose, Fans, Scarfs, to Match

Rage for Ensemble Idea in General Reaches to All Accessories.

Among the most intriguing glove novelties are the mousquetaire in bright colors—rose, yellow, absinthe, turquoise. They are reminders of the styles chronicled long, long ago, but not seen in many years. With the rage of the ensemble idea in general, there are stockings and shoes, scarfs and fans to match the new prettily colored gloves. The craze for embroidered cuffs and linings and stitched exteriors has inspired some most attractive novelties. Most of the late styles in gauntlets have cuffs lined with gay plaid or figured silk, and are embroidered in flowers or figures, all in bright colors. The newest gloves have also a bright silk stitching on the back and the seams are overstitched in the same shade. It is unusual to see a glove of the new style with the cuff worn otherwise than inside out, as it were.

The craze for flower trimming, garnitures and fabric-made flowers has stimulated many original designs, and the more important shops are giving conspicuous place to many lovely things in these floral novelties. The single blossoms or sprays that contain one full-blown flower,—a bud and two or three leaves are made of silk, velvet, batiste or metal tissue. Enormous roses, lilies, trumpet flowers poppies, are fashioned out of taffeta, used double, each petal of two shades, hand-sewn and wired between the layers to give it a natural shape. The buds and leaves are made in the same manner and all are attached to a flexible silk or chenille-covered stem. Big, luscious pansies are made in velvet shading from deep purple to pale lilac and in the dull reds and yellows that are found in garden flower beds.

Water lilies are marvelously reproduced in white taffeta, and the round yellow variety is made to look like the real article with organdie, tinted with water colors. The pads are done in green silk, cleverly veined and wired, and long stems are of rubber and silk. A great variety of poppies and other large flowers in silk and velvet are stitched with flosses, and some, particularly those done in black velvet, are showily outlined with rhinestones. Almost every flower grown is reproduced in this fabric version, somewhat nouveau in its art, to be sure, but decorative. Sweet peas, wistaria blossoms, violets, nasturtiums, delphinium and snapdragons, gaudily painted in their true colors, are all most cleverly done. A homely intriguing novelty is the little posy and spray of leaves crocheted with colored yarns.

Subtlety of Coloring; Marked Individuality

Contrast in Fabric and Color of New Millinery

Contrast in texture as well as in coloring that is achieved by the use of materials of varied character is exemplified in the new hats for early summer. These feature new ways of combining velvet and straw. Besides being bound and faced with velvet, many have crowns made entirely of the fabric draped in flattering lines.

Wide-brimmed hats frequently have a full crown of velvet with a brim of straw, or the order is reversed and a soft gathered or shirred brim of velvet is attached to a crown of straw. On black hats of this type pink roses or yellow water lilies add a bit of color.

General at Twenty-Four

Napoleon, the greatest of modern generals, was raised to the rank of general at the age of twenty-four years, after he had submitted and carried out a plan to drive the English and Spanish out of Toulon.

Circular Flounces in Youthful Dance Frock

Sophisticated simplicity is expressed in this youthful dance frock. Front fullness, a significant detail of the latest models, is achieved by double circular flounces and this circular line is repeated in a short cape effect in back.

Chic: How It Depends Upon Your Silhouette

"And what is chic?" the lady said, whereat the great couturier lifted up his hands in helpless appeal to the heavens. It was an indefinable je ne sais quoi, a transcendent quality which you either had, or didn't have—a safe reflection that. If you had it, only artistic clothes could bring it out; if you lacked it, a skillful dressmaker could make you at least simulate its effect. More no man could say.

In the first place, chic is the world's greatest sales argument. From the humble little milliner in the crowded sections to the eminent halls of the grande couture, no other word is half so potent. It is the fourth dimension of the mode—few know what it's all about and those that do guard the dark secret carefully from a mystified world. What lady does not thrill at the intelligence that she is chic? Call her beautiful and she will make the mental reservation that the beauty caterers are at least a contributory cause, but call her chic, and she is convinced that hers is a gift of the gods.

And in a measure it is. Given a graceful figure, correct carriage and fashionable well-fitting clothes and lady can exhibit all the chic of the Longchamps Parisienne. It isn't a quality peculiar to the chosen few, and the only invocation necessary to the gods is that your silhouette correspond to the mode of the moment. Twenty years ago, when clothes were designed for the statuesque Victorian, the slender lady could scarcely hope to attain chic—today the lineal descendant of the plump Gibsonian is in the same predicament.

Stripped of all its carefully acquired mysteries the quality of chic, then, is nothing more than the proper balance between fashionable clothes and the individual figure. To which must be added a carriage which is in harmony with the manners of the moment.

Ensemble Idea Is Being Used in Various Schemes

The ensemble idea, illustrated in all its popularity this season in entire costumes, is being carried out in other ways as well. One hears today of ensemble lingerie, millinery, footwear and what-not. The scheme of matching undergarments, petticoats, negligees, has taken so well that the tendency is all toward modifying the very violent combinations that come to disregard all sense of proportion. Eyes have wearied of confusion and over-elaboration; the quieter arrangements in dress are most welcome.

One among the latest ensembles is a "set"—hat, veil and scarf all in the newest and most brilliant shade of green. It comes from the other side labeled "apple" green, though it is far greener than any fruit ever grown. The hat, a close shape of rough straw with side brim rolling slightly, is trimmed with a band of dyed breast feathers. The veil of open mesh silk net is stitched with a scroll pattern of floss in machine embroidery and is large enough to drape as an automobile scarf-veil over hat and shoulders. A long straight scarf of chiffon with a cluster of wide tucks on each end completes this showy but smart little ensemble.

Other sets in gray, beige, mauve and all the spring shades are shown. Especially chic are those in geranium red, the rage of the moment.

Scarfs Are Rampant

The warm kasha scarfs that delighted women during the cold months have given place to rainbow-hued chiffons and silks thrown nonchalantly over the shoulder. Some of these are decorated with quaint animals and plants never seen outside the depths of the deep blue sea. The riotous color schemes are reproduced in the strings of beads and necklaces which are so universally worn, designed in gold, silver, amber or wood.

Ranks High in Literature

The Heimskringla has been called "the most important prose work in old Norse literature." It is a history of Norse kings. Some were mythical, others real. The author was an Icelander, Snorri Sturlason (1178-1241).

YOUTH PROLONGED.

When we are twenty we look upon forty as old age, or the next thing to it, when we are sixty we look upon forty as youth's full bloom Apart from this attitude dependent on how old we are, however, there is much evidence and seemingly pretty general agreement that youth now holds its own and flourishes much further along in the years than it did in previous generations Speaking before the Royal Institute of Public Health recently, Dr Percy Hall said that under Queen Victoria "a woman of forty was an old woman who wore voluminous flannel petticoats and a shawl around her shoulders while she sat by the fire crocheting,' but now a woman of forty "looks twenty, plays golf and tennis during the day, jazzes far into the night and comes down first to breakfast without the temper of a bear '

In part at least this is unquestionably true The new woman of forty may come down to breakfast first because she is beginning to wake earlier, her cheerful manner may be carefully cultivated, and her fertilized face may "look twenty" only when a girl of that age is not present, but she does all the things enumerated and has definitely repudiated the habits of women of her age in former times. Dr. Hall says the transformation has been accomplished by casting away superfluous clothes and wearing silk next to the skin, but there is more to it than that. Chiefly, perhaps, it is the age in which we live, with its determination to woo the muse of youth and get all the fun out of life possible before the infirmities of age masterfully call a halt.

END OF A BAD LAW.

Oregon's school law, which the Federal District Court of that commonwealth ruled against about a year ago, has now been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States The law was enacted by popular initiative and through a very narrow majority. It is said to have been of Ku Klux Klan origin and to have been aimed at the Roman Catholic Church, but at the same time it suppressed all religious schools as well as all private schools of whatever character by compelling all children between eight and sixteen years to attend the public schools during the entire year. This not only violated the American principle of religious liberty, but gave to the state and took from parents all rightful choice in the education of their children

The Supreme Court's ruling does not deny the right of the State to pass compulsory education laws, but with reason and sound judgment holds that the guarantees of religious freedom and individual liberty are violated when the attempt is made to say exactly how and where children shall be educated. A State's decision as to what shall be within its own borders can be and has been too rarely questioned, but drastic enactments of this kind by a narrow majority obtained through religious prejudice prove the need of some Federal tribunal to restore the rights of citizens when these are invaded by hasty and ill-advised local legislation, particularly when the precedent established is a menace to our institutions and to the people of the country at large.

TIRES PAY THE DEBT.

It In 1876 that Sir Henry Wickham germinated in Kew Gardens, London, the seeds of the Hevea Brasiliensis, otherwise known as Para rubber, and sent the plants to the British East Indies where they became the nursery stock of the plantation rubber trees. In 1905 these plantations produced 174 tons of rubber while the wild rubber areas, principally those of Brazil, produced 39,000 tons.

It was about that time that the automobile began to give promise of being a great factor in our economic life, and in 20 years this country was operating 18,000,000 self-propelling, rubber-shod cars. But with a lack of foresight amounting to fatuousness we made no provision for a rubber supply, and by 1924 plantation rubber had reached a production of 1,000 tons, while wild rubber had fallen to 28,000 tons

Today the British are having their innings. Crude rubber is ranging from 60 to 70 cents a pound, New York, compared with 20 cents just a year ago, and from teething rings to tires every American user of rubber must pay tribute to British canniness, the aggregate for the ensuing year being estimated at about $400,000,000 In short, Britain has maneuvered us into a position where out of our own pockets comes the payment of the British debt to the United States. Yankee shrewdness has had a bad fall.

WISE SCHOOL BOARDS.

'It is fortunate for our growing boys and girls, that the members of the school boards in some municipalities are men of vision

While the reason for attendance at school is the development of the mind, these men realize that the youngsters are many hours of the day in the school room, that something more than arithmetic, spelling, grammar, and so forth, should be taught. Accordingly time is set apart for little talks on personal hygiene, the care of the body in general, how the body can affect the mind, the importance to all the organs of the body is the position of the boy or girl in sitting or standing A certain amount of time is given to physical training, properly directed exercise, play ground or group games, and so forth.

What does this mean?

That the teacher will also keep an eye on the pupils, and will note cases of round shoulders, uneven shoulders, shuffling gait, and other little deficiencies which can be so easily corrected at school age. These boys and girls will be that much better physically in the days of manhood and womanhood, and what is worth more to a community than the wealth of its citizens

It is indeed unfortunate that some school boards think of physical training, of games, and athletics as "frills,' and that they should have no place on the time table

Why there is nothing the parents are more interested in, than in the health, the well being, the proper physical development of their children, and they will willingly pay the small amount necessary in taxes for this kind of supervision When I examined the boys in a preparatory school some years ago, I made out three records, one for the boy's own use, one for the school, and one was mailed to the parents The principal told me that along with my report, he sent the report as to the boy's standing in his studies The letters from the parents indicated that they were vastly more interested in the boy's physical progress, or lack of it, than they were in his mental advancement. And when you think of it, why shouldn't they be?

I just pass this along, because there may be some school boards who hesitate to spend money on physical training If they spend it judiciously, they will find that the parents will back them up.

Health Board Orders Donovan To Close Plant

Wilbur Rendering Plant Odors Unbearable According to Wilbur Residents Seeking Relief—Babcock Asks Permit to Sell Grade A Raw Milk.

Timothy J. Donovan, who has leased the old Fischang bone factory on Chapel street for a rendering plant, was directed to close the plant at once by the board of health at its regular meeting Tuesday evening at the city hall after the board had listened to complaints from those who reside in the vicinity of the plant. Under the ruling of the health board, Mr. Donovan will not be able to operate the plant without first obtaining permission from the board of health.

At the May meeting of the health board a large delegation of Wilbur residents waited upon the board seeking relief from the odors from the rendering plant. They had also filed a petition with forty-five signatures asking that action be taken against the Donovan plant. At that time the board adopted a resolution that if any odor arose from the plant within twenty-four hours after that meeting that the plant be closed down.

Again Seek Relief.

Tuesday evening the same delegation of Wilbur residents again waiting upon the the board and said that while the odor was somewhat improved since May, that it was still "very rank and unbearable"

Gustav Pick, who bought the old Sweeney property in Wilbur, said he had expended $10,000 in improving the property for boarding house purposes and was losing money by reason of the odors Boarders would spend one night there and then leave holding their noses, he said

Other residents in the vicinity of the plant said that Saturday and Sunday along with the oppressive heat wave was the unbearable odors from the rendering plant which would make any one wish that they could move away or move the plant away.

Mr Donovan said that he had sent away for a machine but it had not arrived yet At the May meeting he said he had ordered the machine He also said that he had not dumped anything into the brook since the May meeting.

Could Not Account For It.

Mr. Fischang said that there had not been a drop of water from the plant placed in the brook since the last meeting of the health board He said he was unable to account where the odor came from. Those complaining said the odor was at night. There was no night cooking done at the plant. They finished about 4:30 o'clock every afternoon at the latest Odor Comes From Plant.

Dr. Daniel Connelly, city health officer, who with members of the sanitary committee of the board and the city engineer had visited the plant Tuesday afternoon said his candid opinion was that the odor came from the plant itself and not from the brook

He said that on June 3 he had gone there one evening with Mr. Donovan and investigated and found that nothing was being placed in the brook from the plant but was being dumped into a cesspool nearby. The odor, however, was so strong that it made him "sick to his stomach" and he was unable to rest comfortably the rest of the night.

To Take Action if Board Didn't.

Dr Connelly said he had been informed that residents there had taken the matter up with legal authority. This legal authority owned the greater part of the brook and had stated that if the "health board did not have back bone enough to close the plant he would place an injunction on the plant and take the matter up with the state board."

Donovan Wanted 15 Days.

Mr. Donovan thought he would be able to remedy matters if given fifteen days more to do so. He said he would flush out the brook and use disinfectant.

Board Takes Action.

After some further discussion the board adopted a motion ordering the plant to be closed.

It was brought out that the legal authority who owns the greater part of the brook in question was Judge A. T. Clearwater. The judge when he had read an account of the May meeting of the health board in the newspapers had gone to Wilbur and made an investigation of conditions.

To Sell Grade A Milk.

Dr. Connelly said that Mr. Babcock of Hurley avenue had recently had his herd of cows tuberculin tested and of the eighteen cows all but two had passed the test. He had since disposed of the two cows that failed to pass the test. He was now producing Grade A raw milk and wanted a permit from the board to so label it.

Will Establish Two Plants.

Mr. Babcock was willing to build another plant on his property to handle Grade A milk exclusively while from the present plant he would handle Grade B raw milk. He produced a large share of the milk he sold and purchased milk from other producers.

What Kaufman Thought.

Commissioner Frank Kaufman, of the Kingston Dairy on Downs street, said that what might happen would be that if he ran short of one kind of milk he would use the other. He said he had known such cases to happen. He did not favor anyone having a permit to handle two grades of milk at the same place.

Dr Connelly said he had known Mr. Babcock for over thirty years. He was an honest man and would live up to his agreement with the board.

Produces Grade A Now.

Dr. Harold Clarke, the food inspector, said that Mr. Babcock was now producing six cans a day of Grade A milk and as long as he established two separate plants to handle both Grade A and Grade B he saw no reason why he should not be granted permission to label his Grade A milk as such.

Laid Over to July.

After some further discussion the request of Mr. Babcock was laid over until the July meeting of the health board.

Table State Aid Proposition.

The board has been considering the question of state aid for the city laboratory for several months past. Mayor Block said he had laid the question before the Academy of Medicine, but they did not approve of the proposition and for that reason he thought the matter should be laid on the table for the time being.

Dr Connelly said that it was expected to lay the proposition before the Ulster County Medical Association at its next meeting

To Attend State Convention.

Dr. Connelly called attention to the state health convention to be held later at Saratoga Springs. The board granted permission to the officers of the board to attend the annual sessions as had been the custom for many years past.

Bills against the board were read and audited and the board then adjourned.

Protect Children In Vacation

National Safety Council Pleads for Protection of Children in Summer —Asks Parents to Show How to Avoid Accidents.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, June 10.—An appeal to the parents of America to show their children how to avoid accidents during the vacation season, was issued today by W. H. Cameron, managing director of the National Safety Council, who suggested some practical methods to protect youngsters while the schools are closed.

Being a child from five to nine years of age is the most dangerous job in the world, according to Mr. Cameron, who points out that children lead all other ages except old age in practically every kind of accident. Of all the losses occurring annually in the United States, 87 per cent of them are due to carelessness and lack of education along safety lines. About 5,000 youngsters are killed by automobiles every year and most of these fatal accidents naturally take place during the vacation seeason when the children are at liberty to roam the streets and when motorists are using their cars more often.

Playgrounds, adequately protected, should be provided for the children, declares Mr Cameron, who appeals to city fathers to awaken to the need confronting them if they desire to protect the country's foundation—children.

"It is sad to reflect that the lives of more than 7,000 youngsters, under 15 years of age, who met accidents resulting in their deaths during 1924, could have been saved in about 90 per cent of the cases if these children had only received the necessary accident prevention education," said Mr. Cameron.

"It is encouraging, however, to know that during the present school year more than 2,000,000 pupils in public and parochial schools have learned the A B C of safety, which means 'Always Be Careful.' Parents should serve as examples of carefulness. They should teach their children that the acts and habits of everyone have an influence on the health and welfare of others. Practically all accidents to children are the result of carelessness, neglect, disorderly habits and thoughtfulness on the part of adults. Curiosity also leads children into dangerous paths.

"Parents should teach their children not only how to cross streets and highways safely, but also the importance of limiting their playing and walking to the sidewalks. Of course, they should impress upon their youngsters the importance of always being alert and watchful. Small children never should be allowed to go far from home unless attended by older persons.

"The attention of parents is also called to the fact that shrubbery plots which occupy the center of some streets, are often an attraction for children at play. Youngsters in these plots are often temporarily concealed by the foliage and when they dart out into the street they are taking chances of being run over by passing motor vehicles

"Most children get a wonderful lot of pleasure out of coasting down a steep hill, across street car tracks in their flying vehicles; this is a pastime that is full of danger. Parents should see to it that the children use hills that do not cross streets on which there is traffic.

"In some cities 'play streets' have been designated for the exclusive use of children during certain hours when vehicles are barred. This plan has been found most effective and has been generally commended as it not only provides a place for the youngsters to play but also leaves the nearby streets practically clear for traffic.

"Children who go to the country naturally will just delight in climbing trees, especially fruit trees. Parents should inform their youngsters regarding the necessity of climbing only out upon the strong branches and where there are several strong branches which can be easily grabbed if the child slips. Young people also should be sure that the ladders they use are safe and sound. Another way to prevent falls is not to play on stairways.

"Parents should make sure that a strong swimmer is always nearby when children go in bathing. Children should be certain that the water is deep enough into which to dive safely. The first dip into cold water should be taken gradually. Short frequent dips are better than staying too long in the water. An hour should elapse after each meal before one goes in bathing, and diners should be sure that their food has digested are taking a chance of getting cramps. Ponds with cold springs in them are good places to avoid. Boys should not dare their playmates to take chances in deep water unless they are good swimmers.

"Children should be warned about playing in bare feet and should be cautioned to watch out for broken glass both on the beaches and in streets, sidewalks, yards, etc. Projecting nails should be turned down or removed.

"Boys and girls should play in the shade as much as possible so as to avoid sun stroke, taking things quietly when it is very hot and not drinking ice water when over heated.

"In the summer time children naturally are much more apt to have opportunities to get hold of firearms. Parents should tell their dear ones of the dangers attendant on handling guns, revolvers, etc., and impress upon them the fact that the gun which usually is reported not to be loaded often is found to be dangerous—after somebody has been killed or injured. Parents should carefully examine the cartridge chamber to ascertain that the firearms are not loaded before leaving them around where children have an opportunity to play with them.

"Children should be taught that railroad tracks should be avoided and instructed of safer places in which to play. Of course, parents should tell their children to 'stop, look and listen' when they get to a railroad crossing.

"Parents naturally want their youngsters to have lots of fun and these suggestions appear to be mostly 'donts' which brings up the question as to where children can play. For city children the nearby recreation centers and municipal parks offer the safest chances for recreation under competent supervision. The suburbs usually are better places in which to bring up children because of there being less congestion, more open spaces, etc."

In conclusion, Mr. Cameron pointed out that parents should call the attention of children to the various safety sign posted along the streets and highways and should explain just what these different signs mean. Parents should warn their youngsters against dashing unexpectedly in front of passing motor vehicles. Another way that children flirt with death is by riding bicycles upon crowded thoroughfares and roller skating upon the streets, instead of upon the sidewalks. Other dangerous sports include hitching on the back of automobiles and attaching toy wagons to moving vehicles.

Eleanor Gunn Says

SPORTS CLOTHES IMPLY A BOYISH FORM

Sports clothes and the boyish figure are synonymous. While French women are slender and diet, even as you and I, they are not admirers of the perfectly straight figure sans curves, and seldom—unless thoroughly under American influence—affect brassieres, yet they wear and delight in sports clothes.

It must be remembered that the French who follow tradition faithfully, have centuries of tight-lacing to overcome. That they are overcoming it at all is greatly to their credit, also the fact that they are taking, not only to the habiliments of sports, but to sport itself is commendable. Country clubs are springing up in and around Paris, giving a new setting for still a newer type of fashion.

A One-Piece Frock Simulating the Two-Piece Mode.

The success of the jumper or two-piece dress is established even for town wear, so that it seems rather logical that some one would develop a frock which, while in one-piece, had the effect of being in two. Such a frock is developed in peach-colored crepe.—for all shades of pink belong to the sports fraternity of frocks,—and has a finely pleated skirt joined to a plain jumper. The belt extends into a strap effect at either side and is covered with buttons like a Coster costume.

Frocks of this ilk are liked in crepes, wash silks, and flannels, and in every color, with the scales dipping toward the pastel range, especially toward rosy hues.

White, be it known, is not as smart for sports as colors. It seems superfluous to add that one's hat is expected to match. There are doeskin and attractively colored kid shoes, some with mother of pearl medallions, which may be matched up with the frock, flesh or matching stockings completing the symphony.

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS

Back Fulness Revives Discussion of Bustle.

The admitted interest in fulness which is placed at the back, does not imply a return of the bustle, though it naturally revives memories of it. Neither bustles nor hoops have a place in overcrowded cars and subways, and though fashions may frequently appear to be illogical, they are, as a matter of fact, a reflection of the times, which leads us to believe that such fulness as is permitted will be governed by traffic regulations.

The grand dame of the Civil War days measured elegance by the width of her skirt and the number of her flounces. Things went to such extremes that ten-yard hems were common occurrences. It must be remembered, too, that the width was spanned by a semi-rigid stiffener. Extremes had been reached, there were whisperings from Paris; and then, in the early '70s the hoop was dropped almost overnight.

Dressmakers, however, were still too much wedded to the idea of great fulness for skirts. When the hoop was discarded, fulness had to be arranged in some new way. Thus came the bustle. The front of the dress was straight and molded, with all the excess material draped in many ingenious ways, over a pannier shape, which was fastened to the waistline in the back. Some called this the Grecian bend, but more excess developed. In a short time, the bustle measured fifteen inches or more horizontally. It had a tenacious life, as, despite some reverses, it existed well toward the middle of the '80s.

Remarkable Bird

The hoatzin of British Guiana is a remarkable bird. Almost as soon as hatched it crawls out of the nest by using its wings as forefeet. The "thumb" and "forefinger" of the wings have claws with which the young bird climbs

Taking Stains From Glass

To remove paint and varnish from glass, use three parts of American potash to one part of unslaked lime. Lay this on with a stick and let it remain for some time. Paint spots may also be removed by rubbing them with very hot, sharp vinegar.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

SUN-BEARS AND CAMELS

"I am the ugliest bear in the world except possibly you," said Morris Malay Sun-Bear, usually known as Morris Sun Bear.

"And I could say the same of myself," said Maxwell Malay Sun-Bear, usually known as Maxwell Sun-Bear.

"Ah," said Morris Sun-Bear," the reason why you are almost as ugly as I am, or why I am almost as ugly as you are, is because we are both brothers. We belong to the same family."

"Yes, our family is a hideous one," said Maxwell. "No other family of bears compares to ours for ugliness."

"We are famous for other things, too," said Morris.

"What?" said Maxwell.

"Well, we are the crossest of bears and when they say, as they do sometimes, 'You're as cross as a bear,' I've been told that they had the Malay Sun-Bears in mind.

"We can bark like dogs. We have short, thick hair. Our bodies are too small in comparison with our big heads and feet."

"We have only one head and one body apiece," said Maxwell.

"True," agreed Morris, "but I was talking about all of us—the whole family. I came from the Malay peninsula and so did you. Others of our family came from around India somewhere. But I am not worrying about them, for I know they will uphold the family name of being cross and ugly."

"Yes, we are the smallest bears in the world," said Maxwell. "In fact, we have a good deal of which to be proud."

"To tell you the honest truth," said Morris, "we have nothing of which to be proud, and a great deal of which to be ashamed, but we're not going to admit anything like that, for we wouldn't be that pleasant.

"It's a Joke," Said the Dromedary.

"Here come some people. It can't be closing time yet. Bark, Maxwell. Show you're a cross Malay Sun-Bear."

Maxwell barked and so did Morris, and by the time the people came near them they were as cross as cross could be, for it is the nature of the Malay Sun-Bears to be cross, ugly, and peculiar—and that's enough for one family of animals!

But not far away were the camels and they were talking once more about their favorite joke.

"Go on," said the Camel, grinning foolishly, "tell it to me, I beg of you."

"You needn't beg it of me, for I expect to tell you anyway and I don't need to go on for I expect to stand right here. I don't have to move when I speak, except my mouth and maybe my jaw."

"Oh," said Campbell Camel, "I didn't mean for you to go on and take a walk. I meant you to go on with your joke. But of course camels aren't supposed to have many brains so I didn't express myself well."

"Whether we have many or whether we have few, it makes no difference to me," said the Dromedary, "even though it did sound as though I was most particular in my choice of words.

"But to tell you the joke—the great and mighty joke, the funny little joke."

"Well," said Campbell Camel, "is the joke little or big, is it great or small?"

"It's a joke," said the Dromedary, "and I am making it sound funnier by saying a lot before I tell you the real point of my story."

"My dear Dromedary," said Campbell Camel, "take my advice and don't take too long to tell a joke. By the time you get to the funny part, folks are all worn out waiting."

"Well," said the Dromedary, "my joke is this. There was a play given in a theater and the scene was supposed to be in Africa from where everyone knows I come. But did they have dromedaries on the stage? Not a bit of it! They had camels with two humps such as you have. And you and all your family come from Asia."

"That certainly is a joke," said Campbell Camel, "and I should think people would know that camels, or Bactrian Camels as they are usually called, have two humps and come from Asia while you, old Dromedary, with your one hump, hail from Africa."

Not That Tired

Teddy complained of being tired when asked to do things for his mother. When evening came and she wanted him to run to the store for her he was still tired. Then some one suggested that they all go to the movies.

His mother said: "Teddy won't want to go; he's been tired all day."

"Oh!" cried Teddy, suddenly animated, "I'm not so tired as all that!"

COLD DESSERTS

During the summer, the desserts which appeal to the housewife are those which are refreshing and easy to prepare.

Banana Whip. — Take six ripe bananas, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of walnut meats and one cupful of whipped cream. Press the bananas through a ricer, add the lemon juice, sugar and walnut meats chopped fine. Chill thoroughly and serve in sherbet glasses with a spoonful of cream. A teaspoonful of finely-minced mint added to the fruit before mixing adds a nice flavor.

Lemon Snow.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water and after ten minutes add two cupfuls of boiling water, one cupful of sugar, the juice of three lemons and the grated rind of one. Stir until dissolved and chill. When cold and beginning to set, beat with a whisk until frothy, then fold in three well-beaten egg whites. Heap by spoonfuls on a glass dish and sprinkle thickly with coconut. Chill and serve with a custard sauce.

Marshmallow Custard.—Beat two eggs slightly and add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of thin cream and flavoring to taste. Place a marshmallow at the bottom of each custard cup and pour the mixture over them. Bake in a pan of hot water until the custards are set. Place in the ice box to chill.

Pineapple Compote.—Take one pineapple to five bananas. Slice the pineapple and cook in a heavy sirup until tender. Cool and arrange in a glass dish. Cover with sliced bananas, sprinkle with grated nutmeg and repeat. Serve with whipped cream and cake.

Cream Prune Pie.—Put through a sieve a cupful of stewed prunes; add a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, one-third of a cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, pour into a pastry-lined plate and bake until firm. Cover the top with a meringue, made from the two whites, adding a little sugar and flavoring. Bake until brown in a slow oven.

Squirrel Changes Coat

On the Pacific coast the chickaree is a sleight-of-hand artist in the matter of clothes. He changes with the climate, says Nature Magazine. In the humid, heavily wooded region bordering the Pacific he wears a coat that is rich, dark brown, but underneath it changes to a beautiful orange tone.

A Neat Slogan.

Some bright westerner has twisted a phrase into a slogan so pat that it has been adopted by an Oklahoma farmers' organization. The slogan is one we commend to gardeners everywhere: "Weed 'em and reap."

The guy that said "True love never runs smooth" must have had some rough petting.

Sal.

Saleslady Sally shifted her gum
Casually to the other cheek,
Sold a bottle of loud perfume
To a colored girl—then started to speak:
"Had a date with Bill last night.
Believe, me, Flo, that was a date.
He showed me a swell time an' I showed him—
Ladies' corsets? Ninety-eight!—
That I was able to appreciate."
Saleslady Sally turned around.
Wrapped up some paint for the bathroom floor.
Handed it out with regal grace,
Nibbled her gum, and spoke some more:
"We danced 'till nearly 3 o'clock.
And Bill is quite a dancer too.
Gee, kid, the things we pulled off—
Holeproof hosiery, twenty-two—
Would sure have made a hit with you.
Saleslady Sally planed up some ribbon,
Pricked her finger and paused to cuss,
Sold a cake of Pebeco,
Turned to Flo and chortled thus:
"He hired a taxi to take me home
Although the price was pretty steep—
An' as we rode I let him hold—
Elastic brassieres, very cheap!—
My hand, until I fell asleep."

The corn fed girl of today is not fed on the same kind of corn as her sister of twenty years ago.

Chief Mourner—All my girl wants to do is eat and dance.
First Assistant—She must have the foot and mouth disease.

With some folks an idea and an ingrowing toe nail are the same. They both hurt.

"Any fashions in the paper, daddy?"
"Yes, but they are of no use to you, dear. It is yesterday's paper."

What could be more depressing than being the wife of a man who has the reputation of being a "good fellow."

The headline "No Flappers in Greece," makes us think of pancakes.

BUYS FINE PROPERTY LOCATED AT ASHOKAN.

Mrs. Mary De Shaw of 317 Clinton avenue has sold through her broker, I. Paradies, of 19 Railroad avenue, her lovely property located at Ashokan, N. Y., to Mrs. Mary Schellman, of 922 Hoadson street, Hoboken. Mrs. De Shaw for a number of years has used the Ashokan property as a tourist rest and inn, and it is considered one of the finest properties in that section, containing about ten rooms and with every up-to-date improvement. It is located 200 feet on the City Boulevard.

Mrs. Schellman, who has for several years been living in Ulster county, finds it most ideal. This is the fifth property purchased from the same broker in three years, as she had only sold the large Castle Inn at Stone Ridge, N. Y., to Steven Brodfeller, and returned back to Hoboken. On account of her health she was advised to return to this section. She will take possession this week and will be pleased to see her many friends which she has made while living in Ulster county.

Flashing Lights On Crossings

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, June 9.—The Public Service Commission has issued an order requiring that hereafter all automatic warning signals which may be installed at any highway grade crossing of a steam or electric railroad must be of the horizontal flashing type This order will apply when new signals are installed or existing ones are replaced. The purpose of the order is to have a uniform type of automatic warning at grade crossings to avoid confusion and misunderstanding and to further enhance the safety of the public using the highway grade crossings

The commission in the order further recommends the installation of the signals in the center of the highway upon each side of the railroad, whenever the physical conditions of the crossing will permit such an installation to be made It is held by the commission in a memorandum that when the signals are in the middle of the road the lamps are always within range of the automobile drivers' vision, whereas they might not be if the signals were at the side of the highway.

In its memorandum the commission holds that the flashing light is more reliable, having fewer parts and none of the parts being exposed to the elements. Statistics of the Pennsylvania railroad showing comparative failures of the wigwag and the flashing light signals were cited to show the superiority of the light. The wigwag must be located at the side and the swinging disc cannot be displayed as near to the ground as the light.

Issuance of the order follows a hearing held recently at which representatives of a score or more of roads discussed the relative merits of the various types of automatic signals The majority of opinion was in favor of the flashing light

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank our friends, relatives and neighbors for their many acts of kindness, words of comfort and beautiful floral tributes during the sickness and death of my beloved wife and our lovely daughter. Signed,

HARRY W RICE,
MR AND MRS CAREY C SECOR.

What They Do at Boy Scout Camp

(Official Statement)

A parent called the local Boy Scout headquarters and asked—We will try to answer that as we have answered the boys on a hundred and one times.

What do you like to do?

Eat? You don't know what eating is until you sit in at a camp mess three times a day.

Sleep? You will think you never slept in your life after your first night in camp.

Swim? Twice a day, boys, twice a day and in the swellest "ole swimmin' hole" you ever saw.

Canoe? There is not enough room on your hands for the blisters you can get canoeing this year, and all brand new canoes, too.

Track? Half the time at camp you're doing that following your leader through thick woods, across streams, over enormous rocks, in and out of mysterious caves, up hill and down hill, and all the time on the lookout for the trail signs and the "find" of a thousand kinds.

Collect? Something new every day. Tracking down a gorgeous butterfly, exploring an old Indian cave, hunting a rare plant, searching the woods for specimens of everything that grows on stem or feet.

Build? Every day erecting something for the camp, that's what we're in scouting for, to build, to make, to consctruct.

Explore? Miles of forests, streams and mountains filled with mysteries.

Climb? Oh, boy, it's all mountain.

Loaf? There's no place like the deep woods to get the real joy of being lazy.

Play? Don't forget the camp has a number of other boys in it just like you, then what do you suppose we are going to have, that real sure-enough athletic field for, why, baseball, tennis, harnyard golf, of course.

Boating? There's miles and miles of river staring you right in the face all day long, kiddo.

Camp fire stunts? Say, son, the Boy Scout camps, invented camp fires, isn't that enough to keep you traveling for a day? There sure are a bunch of real fellows think so, if the way the Boy Scout headquarters are receiving camp applications is any sign. Better get yours in today if you do not want to be disappointed

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Perpignan, France, June 10.—New details of the attempt to assassinate King Alfonso were revealed here today by travellers crossing the border from Spain.

The bomb, which was put beneath a bridge over which the King's train was to have passed last week, was of sufficient power, travellers said, to have killed everybody on the train

Military authorities took the bomb to a field and exploded it in the presence of the king The detonation was described as "tremendous"

The conspirators met in the Cervantiste Club which was organized to support King Alfonso's policies

Madrid, June 10—There was only one plot to assassinate King Alfonso by bombing his train and this was discovered in time to enable police to arrest some of the conspirators, several of whom confessed, a government statement today said.

Increase in Cost of Food

Retail Cost of Food Continues To Increase Here—Upward Trend In Twenty Cities Ranges From 3 to 13 Per Cent.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 10.—The retail cost of food continues to increase in most parts of the United States, the department of labor announced today.

In twenty representative cities the upward trend ranged from three to thirteen percent during the year ending May 15.

Salt Lake City had the biggest percentage of increase. The percentage increase in some of the other cities included in the report was Fall River, Indianapolis and New York 5 per cent; Manchester and Providence 4 per cent and New Haven, Conn., 3 per cent.

During the month ending May 15, fifteen of the twenty cities showed increases as follows:

Salt Lake City 3 per cent; Cleveland and Denver 2 per cent; Cincinnati, Fall River, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Manchester, Minneapolis and Washington one per cent.

An increase of less than five tenths of one per cent was reported by Columbus, New Haven, New York, Providence and Springfield.

As compared with the average cost in 1913 the retail cost of food on May 15, was 59 per cent higher in Washington, while in other cities reporting it was:

Charlestown 55 per cent; New York 54 per cent; Cincinnati 52 per cent; Atlanta and Cleveland 51 per cent; Minneapolis 50 per cent; Providence 49 per cent; New Haven 46 per cent; Los Angeles and Memphis 45 per cent; Fall River, Indianapolis and Manchester 44 per cent; Denver and Salt Lake City 38 per cent.

World Has Little Use for the Hobo Laborer

He is almost a memory, this old-time hobo laborer; he is gone because the need for him is gone. The industrial conquest of the country is accomplished; what remains to be done is extension, development, stabilization.

Industry no longer calls for pioneer labor, but for labor only. And the man who feels an urge to go away out there and help out on that big job has a hard time of it. Alaska, Canada, Mexico, the Argentine—yes, a man can strike out for those places. But there has been no excited talk in employment offices about work in foreign parts for a long time.

Panama is past, it has been a long time since the Canadian transcontinental roads were spiked, and the government railroad in Alaska—oh, lads, where'll we go? The Roman soldiers asked the same question, no doubt, when Rome conquered no longer, and so did adventurous sailors when the great days of the exploring navigators were done. And what became of Mark Twain's hordes of rivermen? Where are the snows of yesteryear?

Camp life still goes on, of course, in the woods, on construction work, and in the oil fields. But these camps are nowadays populated largely by laborers who support families, and who own cars, tailored clothes and bank accounts. The old-timers spin yarns of the happy days as they crouch around the bunkhouse stove, and they sometimes inspire a young laborer who has the soul of a roving adventurer. If he tries the box cars, he finds a dead life. If he journeys in an old flivver, he discovers something better, but not adventure.

The dance hall, the joy-ride, an occasional moonshine spree, poker and dice and the punchboards—these are the most spectacular elements in the life of the American laborer today. Its last raw, vivid colors went out with the hobo, and only the drama of sweat and effort is left. But this plain, simple drama has significance and merit, and, finally, the best words to be said for the hobo is that he was a hero in it.—James Stevens, in Century Magazine.

Soft Drinks Must Be Labeled

Department of Farms and Markets Making Every Effort to Inform Vendors of Beverages of Requirements, to Prevent Frauds Upon Consumer.

Soft drinks with tendencies toward the synthetic are under the ban by the Department of Farms and Markets, according to Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke, unless they are properly labeled showing what is in the bottle. The commissioner stated that the inspectors of the department are taking samples in various parts of the state for analysis by the department chemist to determine the constituents contained in these multi-colored bottled beverages.

It is just about this time of year that soft drink consumption reaches its peak. In the service which the department affords the consumer in protecting him against impure and unwholesome food is included protection against soft drinks which are known as synthetic products.

Commissioner Pyrke stated that while these synthetic products may not be injurious in all cases, nevertheless they constitute fraud of the public unless a label is attached in accordance with the law showing the constituents. According to the commissioner, methyl anthranilate is a very deceptive substitute for grape flavoring. A small quantity of syrup made from this product will manufacture a considerable amount of beverage which looks and tastes like grape juice. In some instances a gallon of this flavoring may be made up into 16,000 six and one-half ounce bottles. There is nothing to prevent the sale of these if they are labeled to show that the beverage is made from methyl anthranilate.

Methyl salicylate is used in a similar manner in the manufacture of a beverage in semblance of birch beer. It is also used for wintergreen flavoring, the commissioner stated. Citrol may be used in the manufacture of a beverage in imitation of lemon soda; saccharin in the place of sugar. Saccharin is five hundred times as sweet as sugar but has no food value. There is also a difference of opinion as to whether it is injurious to health.

Department inspectors, the commissioner stated, have taken samples of "orangeade" which is not manufactured from the juice of the orange. Analysis has shown that the flavor is obtained from an oil extracted from the peel of the orange. This is not injurious, but in order to pass it must be labelled showing that it is made from what is called orange oil and ingredients other than the juice of the orange.

Inspectors have reported to the commissioner on samples of chocolate milk sold in bottles. Examination showed that skim milk had been used in the manufacture of some of the samples. The law requires that if skim milk be used the bottles must be labelled showing this.

Commissioner Pyrke said the department was making every effort to inform the vendors of these beverages as to the requirements of the law to prevent frauds upon the consumer.

PRINCESS PEARL

IN THE olden time, long before you or I were born, there lived under the sea a beautiful mermaid named Pearl. She had long silky hair as fine as spun gold and a beautiful tail as glistening and glinting as her hair.

Wherever she swam, she carried in her hand a long-handled mirror made of pink and white coral, and many times a day she would sit down on the ocean floor of white sand and comb her shining locks.

Princess Pearl had many sisters but she was not content to swim about under the water as her sisters were and often swam far away from the palace of her father King Neptune, without telling anyone about it.

Mermaids never grow tired swimming but they sometimes are afraid and that was what happened one day to Princess Pearl when she was swimming about alone.

Suddenly she came upon something on the ocean floor very big and black and still. It was not beautiful as was everything else in her father's kingdom.

That night she asked her father what it could be that she had seen and he replied that once it had been a mighty thing called a ship and belonged to Man.

"He lives above us," said King Neptune, "and if he had stayed on the land as he should have done and left to me the waters he would not have come to grief. Never speak of it again, my child, for Man's ways are not the same as ours."

But instead of being satisfied with this reply Princess Pearl was now all the more curious. She wanted to know what this Man her father had told her of was like and she resolved to swim to the surface of the sea and find out for herself.

Finding a nice sunny rock by the side of the ocean, Princess Pearl sat down upon it and began to comb her long, bright hair, singing as she worked.

"Oh, beautiful maiden," said a voice close beside her, "never have I beheld such beauty as yours. Be my wife and live with me in my palace and you shall never want for anything that will make you happy."

Princess Pearl dropped her comb, but not her coral mirror that she still held in her hand, while she stared at the stranger who had come upon her so suddenly.

He was very handsome, much handsomer than her father, King Neptune, the Princess thought. His hair and eyes were dark and bright and when he smiled he won the heart of the little mermaid completely.

"Are you a man?" she said. "I think I shall like you and I will marry you and go with you to your palace."

All this time the Princess had been looking at the stranger's feet and wondering how he could swim without a long tail, for she thought the only way to get about on land or in the water must be to swim.

Princess Pearl sat so close to the water that her beautiful glistening tail was still in the water and quite hidden from the stranger's eyes, so when he reached out his hand to help her to rise he no sooner grasped it than he dropped it and stood looking at her in astonishment.

"Have you no feet?" he asked. "How do you get about without feet like mine?"

"Feet?" questioned the Princess, "are those feet?" she asked, pointing to the feet of the stranger. "I think my tail much handsomer than your feet and I am sure I can swim much faster with it than you can with those queer things you call feet."

But it was too late to save her beautiful glistening tail, for the stranger, who was a Prince, had been given a gift from a fairy at his birth, the power to have all he wished come true, and he was so in love with the beautiful Princess that he wished she had feet instead of her beautiful tail.

"Oh," she cried looking at two pretty pink feet in place of her tail. "Oh, I like these queer things, I can jump and run."

The Prince caught her in his arms and kissed her, telling her she was the most beautiful creature in the world and they would be married and have a big merry-making at his palace.

That night when the Palace was still and everyone slept, the Princess with her mirror crept out of the door and found her way to the Ocean again; it was a long way, but just as the sun showed its head over the tip of the hills Princess Pearl slipped into the Ocean with a splash and a cry of joy, for her feet had disappeared and again she wore a beautiful shining tail.

Never again would she leave her beautiful Ocean home, where mermaids never grew old or wrinkled.

The power to have his wishes granted could not reach her in the kingdom of her father, King Neptune, and though the Prince wished many times for the return of his beautiful wife, he never saw her again.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

BRIARS

IF A young woman, unmarried, in walking through the fields or along a country road has a briar stick to her dress, it is a common thing for anyone who happens to be with her to say: "Oh, you've got a beau." And the common superstition is that the briar should be named by the young lady after the young man whom she desires for her sweetheart. Then if the briar remains attached the young lady's affections are returned. If it drops off they are not.

Here again we have our old friend sympathetic magic, and also that magic which, by the ancients, was supposed to reside in a name. This latter idea pops in the magic of peoples who are today living in a primitive state. The name is supposed to partake so intimately of the person to whom it belongs that in some savage tribes the real name of a man is never spoken lest some conjurer might, getting possession of it, work him mischief. He is given another name for everyday use or else spoken of in symbolic or roundabout manner.

So the young lady in naming the briar endues it with the personality of the young man whose name she utters. If the briar sticks to her dress after that it is as if it had been fastened by a knot or by being sewed there, bringing in the "doctrine of knots" which doctrine has been elucidated already in this series. The briar is endued by being named with the personality of the lover; the briar is attached to the girl's dress and therefore to her. The physical union suggests a spiritual union, accomplished by sympathetic magic. If the briar falls off then the charm is broken, the sympathetic current destroyed.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL
Facts about your name: its history; meaning, whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

BECKY

THE saucily piquant name of Becky is too generally in use to pass over as a mere contraction of Rebecca. Becky is given in baptism quite as frequently as Rebecca, and it is not usually regarded as a Jewish name. It comes, however, from the old Hebrew word Rabak which means "to bind."

The Bible tells us that Isaac's wife, who is supposed to represent the ideal of noble wifehood, was named from this word with the idea of signifying the firmness of the marriage bond, but Rebecca was by no means confined to biblical history. She has named the heroines of literature down through the ages.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Ivanhoe" calls the real heroine of his story the gentle and lovable Jewess, Rebecca. But Thackeray in his never-to-be-forgotten "Vanity Fair" gives us the equally memorable Becky Sharp. It is probably safe to assume that all Beckys dated from this period. Their number is legend and quaintness of the name, aside from its literary distinction, insures its perpetuation.

Becky has a curious talismanic gem. It is the loadstone which is said to bring her great happiness and many friends. Saturday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

Names for Church Bells

Payment Would Affect America

Economic Adjustments Would Involve America If Rapid Payment of Inter-Ally Debts on Large Scale Were Attempted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—Rapid payment of the inter-ally debts on a large scale might involve economic adjustments not only on part of the debtor nations, but also on part of the United States, the chief creditor nation, according to an analysis of the inter-ally debt problem made by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park avenue, New York.

While settlement would be wholly desirable for the American taxpayer, the Conference Board points out that such large international payments as are implied in the debt settlement involve a large transfer of purchasing power which ultimately must be reflected in changes in foreign trade and private foreign investment. In its economic aspect, therefore, the chief problem from the point of view of the creditor nation, it is declared, is essentially that of comparing the character and degree of the effect of debt payments on taxation with the effect upon industry, trade and finance.

Such large international payments, the report indicates, may not prove an entirely unmixed blessing to the receiving nation, as shown by experience in the past prices, wages and employment in various lines of industry and agriculture in the creditor nation may be affected by large debt payments when abruptly begun and ended. While there is an advantage to its citizens as taxpayers, at the same time there may be disadvantages to some of them in their capacity of wage earners, manufacturers, business men, exporters or importers, or investors. In this respect, the preliminary report of the Conference Board points out, the inter-ally debt problem is similar to, and closely connected with the reparations problem. In the final analysis, the United States is characterized as the chief creditor, and Germany as the chief debtor nation, and the final economic effect of debt and reparations settlements is likely to be felt in the larger part by these two nations.

The magnitude of the inter-ally account is reflected in the nominal gross total of all inter-governmental debts, at the end of the year 1924, when it amounted to $36,227,000,000. This figure is calculated at the exchange value of the various currency exchange values, and includes the capitalized reparations annuities of the Central Powers. Offsetting the debts and credits, the Conference Board finds the net inter-governmental obligations, on the same basis, amount to $21,330,000,000 with the United States and Great Britain as the largest creditors, and Germany, Italy and Russia as the chief debtors, the total nominal obligations owing the United States amounting to $12,284,000,000 or more than half the total nominal net international obligation. On the assumption that the remaining refunded obligations to the United States be adjusted on a basis similar to the funding terms accorded Great Britain, and if Great Britain's offer to her Allies to require no larger payments than needed to pay the United States, be also assumed as effective, the aggregate of international obligations would amount to $14,300,000,000. The Central Powers and Russia then would emerge as the sole debtors, the United States, France and Belgium as the chief final creditors, and the obligation to the United States would be $10,400,000,000 or more than two-thirds of the total international indebtedness.

The preliminary report of the National Industrial Conference Board on "The Inter-Ally Debts and the United States" which concerns itself with the economic aspects of the problem only, and makes no suggestions regarding policy to be pursued in dealing with the problem, will be submitted as a basis of discussion at the next meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce in Brussels, Belgium, in June, by Fred I. Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, and treasurer of the Conference Board.

Slight Rise in Mortality Rate

During April Compared With First Quarter of Year, Reports Dr. Nicoll, State Commissioner of Health.

According to Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health, the health of the people in New York state was less favorable during April than during the first quarter of the year which was an exceptionally healthy period. Instead of the usual drop there was a slight rise in the mortality rate as compared with March.

However the death rates in the state from tuberculosis, scarlet fever and measles were the lowest ever recorded for the month of April.

As compared with April, 1924, there was a rise in mortality from cancer, diabetes, diphtheria, influenza and pneumonia; the rate for pneumonia, 189.7 per 100,000 population, was the highest recorded for the month of April since the epidemic year of 1918.

There were but 78 infant deaths for each 1,000 live births, with the exception the lowest infant mortality rate ever recorded for April.

Dr. Nicoll points out that whereas in former years the greatest infant mortality occurred during July, August and September, since 1918 the high point in the baby death rate has been in February and March. This phenomenon he states is not due to any increase in the number of deaths during the latter period but to an enormous drop in the number of cases of summer diarrhea due to better environmental conditions generally but especially as a result of more sanitary milk supplies. At present the greatest number of deaths under one year of age is due to causes which can be controlled only through better obstetric and prenatal care which according to Dr. Nicoll is the main objective of the Division of Maternity, Infancy and Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health.

Emersonian Philosophy

When science is learned in love, and its powers are wielded by love, they will appear the supplements and continuations of the material creation.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Because they were rare and valuable, glass bottles frequently were mentioned in the wills of the American pioneers.

Winners Used Exide Batteries.

Peter de Paolo, youthful racing star and nephew of the famous Ralph de Palma, who broke all records on the Indianapolis speedway, Memorial Day, used an Exide battery in his car, according to information received by Mr. Vanderlyn, of 779 Broadway, local Exide Service Station from the Exide factory in Philadelphia.

The following telegram was sent by Duesenberg Bros., designers and manufacturers of De Paolo's car to The Electric Storage Battery Co., manufacturers of Exide Batteries: "The reliable Exide Battery on De Paolo's car helped us win the race."

De Paolo set an average of 101.13 miles an hour for a 500 mile drive and won $38,000.

Another telegram telling of an Exide-equipped car winning a race was received from Charles F. Ganung, who has figured in a number of races in the east. It reads:

"Won two firsts, one second, at races Rochester, May 30, using Exide battery as usual."—Advertisement.

Nonasphyxiating Gas

A new heat and light-producing gas that is nonasphyxiating, has been brought to such high perfection that its heat value and candle power are said to be higher than ordinary gas. Dr. O. U. Bean, who made the Bunsen burner, is the inventor. The new gas is made from oil or the residium from making gasoline. Ordinary gas contains 30 per cent of carbon monoxide, while the new gas contains none. The secret of its being nonasphyxiating is that it is made at lower temperature than ordinary gas. The process promises to be cheap.

Breaking Hold Is Simple

Striking Victim is Futile, Says Noted Life Saver Giving Proper Method Of Subduing Panic-Stricken Swimmers.

The "drowner's clutch" has taken its toll of would-be rescuers. In this article, No. 11, the proper formula for breaking the grip of a drowning person is given. Article 12, the final one of the series, will appear tomorrow.

Lesson No. 11.—Be Your Own Life Saver.

(By Commodore W. E. Longfellow, Life Saving Expert, American National Red Cross.

(Written for International News Service).

One of the questions I hear most frequently when I am lecturing on "Death Grips and How to Avoid Them" is: "What would you do if clutched you with both arms around the neck?" That seems to be most everyone's idea of the action of a drowning person when being rescued. People are genuinely worried at the prospect, but few really drowning people struggle at all and the holds they take are easily thrown off by taking them under water.

Striking is futile and in many cases cannot be done at all, so if you are clutched around the neck simply spin out of the hold get the "near drowner" on his back so he will float well and at once start to tow him in. The method of breaking is determined by which of the assailant's cheeks is against yours. If it is the right cheek, slip your right hand, with palm against him, in between. The thumb should be hooked under the edge of the jaw bone and the end of the longest finger against the nose.

Avoid Victim's Clutch.

Avoid being clutched, but if grasped, the methods described are the easiest way out because it leaves the person ready to be carried. In all the release methods used by the Red Cross, the purpose is to leave the drowner set up to carry, so there always is a turn upon the back to a floating position to be done at the end of it.

A hold on one or both wrists of the rescuer is not uncommon. It is not nearly as dangerous as a hold around the neck, for clearly the other fellow cannot choke you by squeezing your wrist. If both wrists are clutched snap your wrists against the other's thumbs and you will come clear, then turn him and carry to shore. But if both of his hands grasp one of your wrists it becomes slightly more intricate.

Push With Heel.

In such a case, supposing the right wrist is grasped, reach across with your left and get his left wrist. Then throw your body back on the water and drop your left heel into the hollow of his right shoulder. Push with the heel and pull with the wrist and the hold will be broken and he will turn onto his back so you can pull his head back and push up the hips to get him into a horizontal position for carrying.

Cases are far too common where two indifferent swimmers will clutch each other and go under in each other's arms. Rescuers keep away, fearing to be carried under also, and later they are pulled up clasped in each other's arms in death. It is possible to tow such a pair of drowners clutching each other, in together, because it will not be necessary to get their heads out. Their bodies under water weigh but little. One of the physical directors at Annapolis saved two navy nurses who were carried out by the current in this way. He handed one to the other and when they hugged each other he towed them collectively to the trestle across the River Severn.

To get them apart, the rescuer takes position behind the one to be carried, if he can tell which is the poorer swimmer, and takes the throat in both hands. He puts one of his heels over the arms of the two and sets it in the throat of the other and pushes against the windpipe as he squeezes the throat of the one he holds. This simultaneous pressure on the wind of both causes a moment of relaxation when they can be pulled and pushed apart, and the one who can swim best can keep himself up, while the other is carried to safety.

Today We Celebrate

FIRST U. S. FOREIGN WAR.

The first foreign war in which the United States was engaged began 124 years ago today, June 10, 1801, when Tripoli issued a declaration of war against the New World Republic. The ruler of the piratical African state had learned that the United States had paid larger sums to Algiers than to himself, and demanded a large annual tribute, which being refused he declared war. An American squadron under Commodore Richard Dale was sent to the Mediterranean, being followed by squadrons commanded by Commodore Morris and Commodore Preble.

The war continued until 1805 and was a complete victory for the American arms. Prior to the Tripolitan war, the United States and France fought several sea engagements, but war was not officially declared, and the difficulties were settled without recourse to open hostilities.

U. S. CABLE.

The United States direct cable, the first successful ocean telegraph in opposition to the old Anglo American line, was completed fifty years ago today. The S. S. Faraday while laying this cable in 1874, was compelled by storms to cut and buoy it in mid-ocean. The returned the following April, picked up and spliced the end, but had to cut the cable again when but twenty miles from shore, for want of coal. It was picked up again and successfully completed on June 10, 1875. Cable rates which had been ten dollars per word, dropped to 25 cents with competition established—since remaining at the same rate. There are about 300,000 miles of submarine cables today, including all lines.

ERINNA.

A Grecian lady contemporary with Sappho she composed several poems, of which some fragments are extant in the "Carmina Novem Poetarum Seminarum," published in Antwerp in 1588. She lived about B. C. 595. One of her poems called the "distaff" consisted of three hundred exameter lines. It was thought that her verses rivalled Homer's. She died at the age of 19, unmarried.

There is another poetess of the same name mentioned by Eusebius, who flourished in the year B. C. 354. This appears to have been the poetess mentioned by Pliny as having celebrated Myro in her poems.

RECORD DIVIDEND DECLARED

By George F. Baker, 85 Year Old Bank Head.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—It hasn't been so many years ago since the world was greatly excited over the "Osler theory" that men were generally pretty useless at sixty and should be quietly chloroformed.

Today the banking and financial world are extending congratulations to George F. Baker, the 85 year old head of the First National Bank, for declaring a 25 per cent dividend. It is said to be the greatest dividend in New York banking history and it was reported in Wall street today that the dividend will be maintained.

The First National Bank is known in the street as "Baker's bank." It rose from a small beginning. Fifty years ago it was not considered "rich enough" to become a member of the New York clearing house.

George F. Baker is still, at 85, chairman of its board and the principal stockholder and director. He is more regular at his desk than the most humble clerk.

Recently in a speech at a dinner in his honor, he expressed the opinion that the mortality rate among American business men is great because so many of them retire too early.

Machine Guns Halt Rum Ship

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Scituate, Mass., June 10.—Machine gun fire from a coast guard patrol today resulted in the capture of a rum runner motor boat after a five mile chase off Cape Cod. The rum ship was carrying 300 cases of alcohol.

Six coast guardsmen exchanged shots with the two rum runners in the motor boat as the chase went five miles. It was not until the coast guardsmen brought their machine gun into play that the rum craft was brought to a halt.

The staccato cough of the machine gun re-echoing across the water aroused summer cottagers and these were interested spectators to the chase.

But as the coast guardsmen drew alongside the rum craft, the smugglers threw their rifles and revolvers overboard and surrendered.

They gave these names: Frank Sweeney and Frank Lewis, both of East Boston.

The coastguard boat was in charge of Captain J. J. Grymm.

Cal Fails to Keep Cool

The terrific heat wave made the President suffer just like any ordinary citizen. When he departed from Washington, D. C., with Mrs Coolidge for his tour West, he was vestless, his suit was damp and clinging, his collar wrinkled and his tie askew. His face was moist and it was, with great relief that he finally entered the ice-cooled private rail railway officials persuaded him to use.

Paris, June 10.—Premier Painleve was expected to arrive in Morocco by 6 p. m. today on his airplane trip of inspection and consultation with Marshal Lyautey, directing the French campaign against the Riffs.

The Painleve party, in four planes, took off from Toulouse at 5:30 a. m. and arrived in Barcelona, Spain, at 7:45 a. m. They left immediately for Alicante and expected to reach Fez or Rabat, Morocco, before dusk, the war ministry announced.

Spain has started preparations for a fresh offensive against the Riffs, according to today's Journal. The weight of the attack, Madrid dispatches indicated, would give Abd-El-Krim, the Riff leader, a serious problem.

The primary objective, the newspaper said, would be the island fortress of Alhucemas in the Mediterranean on the Spanish Moroccan coast.

Thirty merchant vessels have been requisitioned to embark troops and material for the attack, which would start June 18. The ships were scheduled to put out from Malaga and Algeciras, Spanish ports west of Gibraltar, and from Ceuta, just opposite Gibraltar, in Africa. Two hospital ships will accompany this modern armada.

Love Tryst Ends In Tragedy

Fifteen-Year-Old Girl Takes Her Life Because of Unhappy Romance—Boy in Desperation Shoots Himself Through Head.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Wellesley, Mass., June 10.—Priscilla Amidon, 15 year old school girl, took her life with a revolver in the presence of her eighteen-year-old sweetheart, Sterling Mills, because of her unhappy romance with Mills.

In desperation, the frightened boy snatched the weapon from the nerveless hands of the dying girl and, rather than face the world with his sweetheart dead, shot himself through the head.

This was the latest police and medical examiner's theory today of the tragedy in the woods here.

The girl, daughter of a wealthy crockery merchant, is dead. The youth is dying at Newton Hospital. He has been unconscious and has been unable to give a coherent account of the double shooting.

"I had to do it because she did," young Mills mumbled when found

Priscilla left a note to her mother reading:

"Dear mother:

"I am going away and not coming back. Love. Priscilla."

This was at first thought to indicate an elopement but medical examiner George L. West said today that from the position of the revolver wound on her left forehead he is satisfied that no other hand than the girl's fired the fatal shot.

The junior high school and the high school athlete had been madly in love, police said Parents of both objected because of their age. Young Mills, the police said, decided to leave home. At the final love tryst, police think, separation was too much for the girl and tragedy followed.

Drastic Action On Foreign Debts

Efforts To Be Made By Next Congress For More Drastic Action on Payments—Suggest Shutting Off of Private Credit.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 10.—Clear indications that an effort will be made in the next congress to establish a definite relationship between funding of European debts to the United States and the reduction of domestic taxation were seen at the capitol today.

Such a policy on the part of Republican leaders, led by Senator Borah, as chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, would be advocated with a view to bringing the country as a whole solidly behind the congress in its demand for adjustment of the foreign debts and to make it possible for more drastic action to be taken to compel payment.

The shutting off of private credit in this country to European countries which will not make any move to fund their debts is still being suggested in quarters close to the administration, despite the fact that no hand was raised to stop the loan of $50,000,000, made to a consortium of Italian banks by J. P. Morgan company. It is now reported here that Rumania will soon seek a big loan in the United States and that France is discussing the possibility of increasing the $100,000,000 credit which it has with the Morgan Company in connection with the efforts of finance minister Caillaux to stabilize the franc.

Discussing the foreign debt situation today, Congressman George Holden Tinkham of Massachusetts, declared that the administration "in demanding that there be no further delay in the funding of the foreign debts to the United States is showing a commendable desire to reduce the taxes of American citizens."

Armed Forces Still Needed

Secretary of Navy Wilbur Tells Duke University Graduates—Address Was a Plea For Common Sense In All Lines of Endeavor.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Durham, N. C., June 10.—War is a violation of common sense but armed forces are still needed in the world because "a false doctrine may yet gain supremacy in a nation," Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur declared here today in an address to the graduating class of Duke University.

"A great nation," Wilbur said, "may run amuck and assail a peaceful and happy world with ruthless slaughter and bloodshed. We need police to protect us from the criminal and the insane and so long as nations may be unable or unwilling to listen to reason or be guided by wisdom, we will need armies and navies.

"Strength will appeal to men whose judgment and understanding are so warped that they would ruthlessly assail the weak and helpless. If we would avoid war we must be prepared to resist unjust and illegal attack; if we are to be free we must be strong enough to accept or refuse a challenge of war."

Secretary Wilbur's address was a plea for "comomn scnsse" in all lines of human endeavor and activity.

"The president of the United States" he said, has admonished us that what we need most in government is more common sense. We may broaden this and say that our greatest need in life is more common sense."

Discussing the "great outcry" in the United States against the constant outpouring of statutes and judicial decisions, Wilbur declared that the "man who complains against the flood of judicial decisions is complaining against the flood of life, for these decisions present to the inquiring mind the investigatons of trained minds into new problems of life."

"It is as impossible," the secretary said "to check the flow of legislation and judicial decisions as it is to restore life to its condition one hundred or five hundrded years ago. If legislatures refuse to accept men must somehow work out rules of action for their guidance under new conditions, and these rules will ultimately acquire the force of law."

Wilbur also pleaded for common sense, in the controversies between religion and science.

"We need common sense in religion," he said. "If the Bible is the inspired word of God, as we believe, then he created the universe and left the record of that creation forever inscribed upon all created things. There are at leat two Divine books—the Holy Bible on whose pages are inscribed the doings and sayings of holy men and the book of nature. A part of this historical story is plainly written upon the geological strata which circumscribes the globe. Common sense suggests that these two records be considered together, and to reject and utterly ignore either is equally foolish."

LATEST NEWS OF NEW YORK STATE FARM ORGANIZATIONS

Prepared for This Paper by the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, Ithaca, N. Y.

Return from Europe Mann Praises Work of Farm Bureau Here

A. R. Mann, dean of the New York State College of Agriculture, returned from Europe recently after a year with the International Institute of Agriculture. After observing the work of agricultural organizations in Europe, Dean Mann has the highest praise for the farm bureau movement in this country.

In a letter to Enos Lee, president of the N. Y. State Farm Bureau Federation, the dean says: "I have looked upon the farm bureau movement as the most significant and fundamentally important development in agriculture in recent years. Its work may not be so spectacular as that of some other movements, but it is dealing fundamentally with the problems of a sound development of agriculture and country life.

"The gains the farm bureau is making for agriculture are permanent gains and they are vital forces in holding on the farms the most competent farmers. After traveling about in many of the countries of Europe I am prepared to subscribe wholly to your contents that a primary consideration is to maintain on the farms a population with a high standard of living and of intelligence. If science and education can play their part in agriculture so that the selection as between those who remain on the land and those who go to the cities will result in the most competent individuals remaining as farmers, it will be a result of the first importance in the future of the country.

"Too much emphasis cannot be given to the necessity of so ordering the agricultural development in the United States as to retain on the land an ever increasing proportion of the best and most competent elements.

"In the countries of Europe I find many organizations engaged in extension work but I gain the impression that most of them are concerned exclusively with the questions of improved and increased production and give little thought to the requirement of the farmer as a man and a citizen."

Scores of Livestock Producers to Visit Buffalo Stockyards

Livestock producers of this state from the counties centrally located to the western border will make a tour to the Buffalo stockyards on June 15. The trip was planned by the marketing committee of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation and is under the direction of L. R. Simons of Ithaca, secretary of the committee.

Livestock feeders, farm bureau committeemen and county agents from Oswego, Onondaga, Broome, Cortland, Allegany, Wyoming, Tioga, Tompkins, Cayuga, Seneca, Wayne, Ontario, Yates Schuyler, Chemung, Steuben, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Livingston, Erie, Genesee, Niagara, Orleans and Monroe counties have been invited to join the pilgrimage.

No attempt will be made to unite the county units until the men reach Buffalo. There they will be met at 10 o'clock at the offices of the Producers' Commission association by S. L. Strivings, treasurer of the association, and competent guides. After a tour of the yards the men will be guests at dinner of the association.

It is expected that the tour will result in better marketing of livestock by the New York producers, as it will give them first hand information of the handling of the stock at the yards and acquaint them with the facilities which the Producers' Commission association affords them for selling their stock co-operatively.

League Pays Record Pool Price for April Milk

According to statement which accompanied checks to members of the Dairymen's League Co-operative association for milk delivered in the month of April the pool price for that month is the highest April price in the history of the association. League farmers received a net pool price of $2.135 per hundred pounds.

This price is .385 higher than April a year ago, and .415 above the average pool price for April since the pool has been in operation. It is .74 above the average butter value of one hundred pounds of 3 per cent milk, according to market quotations of butter during the month.

The April report of the association shows total deductions for administrative expenses, depreciation, etc., .065 per hundred pounds, which is a one-half cent decrease below the same figure for March. Ten cents per hundred pounds is deducted for certificates of indebtedness.

Holsteins at New York Sale Bring an Average of $142

The annual spring sale of the New York State Holstein Friesian association was held at the Coliseum on the State Fair grounds at Syracuse on May 7 and 8. One hundred and five head were sold at an average price of $142.

Because of the very bad weather there was only a small crowd on hand.

Helen Wills, national and Olympic games tennis champion, and William M. Johnston, third in the national tennis rankings, plan to play their first eastern tournaments this year at the Skokie Country club, Glencoe, Ill., for the Illinois state championship.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—Industrial stocks were fairly steady today and railroad stocks, after yielding to early selling pressure, recovered most of their losses or made slight gains.

Steel stocks were unusually inactive both before and after the publication of the report of a decrease of 396,000 tons in forward orders, though some of the independents recovered from the slump which closed yesterday's session.

The most favorable reports and predictions for the oil industry failed to stimulate much outside interest in these stocks. Texas company was strong and active, reaching a new 1925 high to 50⅜. Marland, Mid-Continent, Sinclair and other prominent independents were unable to maintain the pace set in the first hour. Standard Oils on the curb and the Stock Exchange were firm.

After a poor start, Havana Electric pushed forward about nine points to 183. American and Foreign Power Company and Montana Power gained five and three points, respectively in fairly active trading, while International Tel and Tel sold three points higher. Columbia Gas gained 2½ and Standard Gas and Electric 1¼. Bearish traders had better success with the rails than with the industrials.

A loss of one or two points in New York Central, Reading, Frisco and other prominent rails indicated at least a temporary withdrawal of buying interest in this section of the market.

Call money rates eased off to 3½ per cent and time money conditions were such as to call for the periodic predictions about the probable lowering of the re-discount rate at the reserve bank this week. Grain markets were firm as a result of the government's crop statement while cotton declined on more favorable crop weather conditions in the southwest.

Conduct Sewing Machine Schools

A sewing machine school in charge of Prof. B. B. Robb of the Rural Engineering Department at Cornell University will be held in Asbury on Tuesday, June 16th, at the Parish Hall. The school will begin at 10:30 a. m., daylight saving time. The women bring their sewing machines at these schools and under the direction of Prof Robb take them apart, clean them, and put them together again. Prof. Robb shows them how to correct such difficulties as slipping of stitch, breaking of thread, adjustment of tension, remedy the hard running machine, skipping stitches and many other difficulties that the housewife runs up against with her sewing machine.

On Wednesday Prof. Robb and his assistant will conduct the household mechanics school at West Hurley in the Sunday school room beginning at 10 a. m., standard time. On Thursday he will conduct the household mechanics school in Stone Ridge at the Library, beginning at 10:30 standard time. West Hurley and Stone Ridge had the sewing machine schools last year.

The household mechanics school includes such things as soldering of household equipment, sharpening of knives and shears, care of electric equipment, etc.

These are all day schools and everybody brings their own lunch. Members or non-members are permitted to attend if they will attend the whole day. This is to prevent the confusion of visitors going in and out while the school is in session.

Morgan to Hurl Against Giants

Mike Morgan will probably get the assignment to hurl them over against the Brooklyn Royal Giants at the Fair Grounds this evening at 6:30 o'clock when the Colonials meet the fast traveling Brooklyn team. Morgan developed a bit of trouble with his port wing last Saturday before the game with Chappie Johnson's club but this has been remedied during the few days lay off and he will be ready to take the assignment this afternoon.

After tonight's game the Colonials will lay off until Saturday afternoon when the Lancaster Red Sox will appear here. Sunday afternoon the Danbury club will be the attraction at the Fair Grounds.

Big Moments In Sport

It may not be known generally, but it is fact, not fancy, that the Chicago Black Sox almost won the world's series of 1919 from the Cincinnati Reds in spite of themselves. The Sox admitted later that they were thoroughly subsidized to lose the series—all for the wife and kiddies—but as the contests progressed the Reds suddenly cracked, and the situation became touch and go.

Aided by the dishonest pitching of Cicotte and Williams, to say nothing of the work of at least half the Sox defense, the Reds won the first two games in Cincinnati and the third in Chicago They needed only two more to clinch the title, but these were a long time coming.

Kerr refused to let the Sox lose behind him and left-handed his way to a victory in the fourth game; then the Reds won the fifth, and the teams went back to Cincinnati. Here Kerr again stepped out with a victory in extra innings, and the following day the Sox won again, leaving the count four games for Cincinnati and three for Chicago, with two remaining to be played.

The first of these—played on the old South Side, Chicago—was to be the last. Williams attended to that. He staked the Reds to six runs in the opening inning, and it seemed all over. But the Moran entry couldn't stand prosperity and were beginning to crack, with the score 8 to 5 in their favor in the last half of the ninth.

Eller had shown unmistakable signs of blowing in the previous inning, and his start in the ninth could hardly be termed auspicious. He hit Eddie Murphy, the first batter, with a pitched ball and walked Leibold.

Weaver was alleged to have been one of the conspirators, but you couldn't have proved it by his conduct at this moment, if, indeed, at any time during the series. He hit an enthusiastic smash to deep right centre that seemed destined for three bases.

Actually it was destined for one of the finest catches it ever has been the good fortune of a baseball crowd to behold.

Roush started running with the sound of the bat, but didn't seem to have a chance. He was still fifteen feet from the ball as it was about to hit the ground, so he did the only thing possible.

He hurled himself through space. But it wasn't enough. His dive fell short, but fortunately its impetus didn't. It carried him bumping along the ground for several feet, and it was in this position that he made the catch.

It undoubtedly saved the game and series.

If Roush had missed, two runs would have been in, Eller would have been out, and the tying run would be resting on third base, without a man being retired. As it was, Eddie Collin's single that followed would have scored the run in question. All it actually did was to drive in Murphy from second base. After which Jackson and Gandil made the second and final outs quite according to specifications.

VOLKER WILL MANAGE THE STUDEBAKER NINE

James Volker, the well-known pitcher, has been made manager of the Studebaker baseball team of East Kingston and has strengthened the lineup considerably. He has succeeded Manager McNally. J. David Schenck has ordered new uniforms and furnished a complete outfit such as bats, balls, masks and gloves for the players. The Studebakers have a number of games booked for the season and Volker expects his team will win the majority.

Everett Scott Out

The run of consecutive games played by Everett Scott, veteran shortstop of the Yankees, was broken on May 5, when he failed to appear in the place he had filled for 1,307 straight championship games. He began his great record-breaking run June 20, 1916, when a member of the Boston Red Sox. The management announced to the press that Scott's legs were paining him, and for that reason he did not take his place in the lineup. However, this was branded as official hokum when Scott, himself, said he was in shape to play and declared that he had just begun to hit. "I didn't mind the breaking of my streak if it was for the good of the team, but I felt as though I was just beginning to be as good as ever," Scott said. "I'll never sit on the bench." In some circles it was intimated that some of the veteran pitchers had kicked about the ground Scott was covering.

CADDY SIGN IS BIG HELP TO GOLFDOM

Small Slip of Paper Has Done Much to Better Conditions of Game.

A slip of paper 4 by 6 inches, which has been placed about various golf clubs of St. Louis, is said to have done more for the betterment of the clubs and of the sport itself than any other one thing, declared Paul G. Palmer, president of Forest Park Golf club. All the little sign says is: "Treat Your Caddy As You Would Your Own Boy."

Last summer Paul H. Miller, executive secretary of Big Brothers' association, co-operating with the heads of the various St. Louis golf clubs, had the cards printed and put about in the locker rooms and at other places in the clubhouses. The matter rested there until Palmer, of the Forest Park club, and others, asked for new signs for this season.

When asked the reason for the request, Palmer said that he felt that the posters, which reminded golfers of their influence on their own caddies, had done as much for the betterment of conditions in general at the Forest Park links as any other one agency.

"There is no better way to influence a boy directly than in some sort of sport," Palmer said, "and the sign simply serves as a reminder to the men that fellows who caddy for them are watching them all the while, in many cases secretly imitating them, not only in the way in which they play the game, but in their attitude toward other things.

"It seems to me that the caddy-master himself determines in a large way the kind of golf club one has. It is hard to see that unless you are very familiar with the operation of the club, but it is true, nevertheless."

Palmer said that he felt that a decrease in the amount of "old-fashioned blue profanity" was in a large measure due to the reminders that the Big Brothers had put up in the clubhouses.

Tagging Major League Bases

Things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, except when they are ball clubs. The Athletics and Giants today led their respective leagues with the same percentage, .681.

Chicago's golden jubilee celebration proved a New York banquet when Terry socked a homer off Bush with two on in the fifth, the Giants winning, 9 to 7.

Luque twisted the Phillies into a Latin semi-solon and the Reds won 3 to 1, Caveney's homer in the seventh deciding the issue, if any.

With McNulty cleaning up with a double, the Indians fell upon Zahnizer like a load of blackjacks in the eighth and beat the Red Sox 3 to 2.

Sothoron made the Dodgers jump through a hoop while the Cardinals rushed Vance off the premises and won, 5 to 1.

After Cobb had tied the score with a homer in the eighth, the Athletics came back in the ninth and scored the winning run, 4 to 3, on Hale's long single to left.

Barnes had nothing whatever to do with the Braves' 7 to 4 victory over the Pirates in 11 innings except that he pitched the ball game and won it with a single with the bases filled.

WANTS WALKER TO MEET DAVE SHADE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—Humbert J. Fugazy, promoter of the Italian hospital fund, postponed from June 13, owing to an injury to Mickey Walker, one of its principals, will make an attempt today to persuade Walker to accept the challenge of Dave Shade. Fugazy announced that he favored July 2 as the date for the show, but he was convinced the state athletic commission would not permit Walker to go through with his bout with Harry Greb unless he accepted Shade's deal as originally ordained by the commission.

Walker caused the postponement by declaring that he had injured one of his toes.

Huggins Will Clean Hous

Schang, Hoyt, Scott, Ward, Jones a Shawkey Head List of Candidat To Go—No Man's Job Safe Fr Now On, Says Miller.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 10.—Satisfi that the gentleman who declared t time cannot age or custom stale m have fouled one into the stand Miller Huggins came out today a stated that he planned to clean hou with the New York Yankees. H named no names, but it is unde stood that such esteemed character as Wally Schang, Waite Hoyt, Eve ett Scott, Aaron Ward, Sam Jone and Bob Shawkey are to be thor oughly ventilated, viz, i. e., and t wit, given the air with Wally Pipp a strong candidate for the sam treatment.

"No man's job is safe on this clu from now on," Huggins said. "I they can't play ball for me, they w have to do it for someone else. am convinced that the time has com to build the Yankees over again."

Huggins already has turned dow one proposition that would have al tered the old Yankeers not a little The writer has it on the best o authority that Ty Cobb offered hi Heilmann and Rigney for Scott an Bob Meusel several weeks ago, bu for reasons not altogether clear he i said to have spurned the offer Meusel wasn't hitting the size of his neck band at the time but has since blown himself to an orgy of home run hitting. Scott has been about as useful as a spare rib. He was the first of the old champions to be led gently but firmly, to the shade of the dugout where he might gasp his last in comfort. Pipp, Ward and Schang followed, although Ward later elbowed his way back into the line-up for an occasional game. That, however, was only because the Yanks lacked a capable substitute.

The same unfortunately for the veterans affected, has not held true in the remaining cases. Wanninger, a coming star at the short field position, has filled in nicely for Scott and is hitting better than the latter ever did. Gehrig, vice Pipp at first base, also has contributed an additional punch to the outfit while Bengough, thought to be a weak hitter, started socking them the first day he replaced Schang and hasn't stopped yet.

In brief, it begins to look as though these changes might be permanent. Huggins's statement bears out this belief. He says no man on the ball club is certain of his job and he probably means it, up to and including certain natural limits. He is not trading Ruth, Meusel, Combs or Dugan, unless it rains rubber building blocks on February 30.

LONGYEAR HEADS PRATT'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

Ralph V. Longyear of this city was elected president of the Pratt Institute Athletic Association for the 1925-26 school year at the annual election on Wednesday, June 3. Longyear, a first year student of architecture in the school of fine and applied arts of the institute, has gained much popularity and his election to the leadership of the largest organization in the school comes as a reward for his fine work throughout the past year as the representative of his class on the athletic council and as a member of the varsity basketball team, of which he is captain-elect.

The Pratt Institute Athletic Association has a membership of over three thousand and the president of the association is automatically chairman of the athletic council, which controls all varsity and inter-class athletics. The Pratt Institute Weekly Bulletin further states that the honor accorded Longyear is unusual inasmuch as he is a first year student, and this is the first time the office has fallen to a member of the first year class.
